The event will be brought to you by a unique partnership of the Foundation for Sport, Development and Peace in collaboration with Western Cape Department for Cultural Affairs and Sport, Nedbank, the Association for International Sport for All (TAFISA) and their partners.

In the midst of local political challenges and international leadership changes in South Africa and globally the focus on the importance of universal values and global governance has become paramount. We believe that sport, development and peace as well as Olympism, which is “To place sport at the service of the harmonious development of humankind, with a view to promoting a peaceful society concerned with the preservation of human dignity” should be supported, also as it contains a vision from which we all can learn and to which we shall all aspire to.

The upcoming 4th International Cape Town Sport and Peace Conference and Expo, 12-15 September 2017 will follow suit on the 2017 New York Roundtable held on 7 April 2017 and seeks to promote sport, recreation and peace worldwide. The 2017 International Cape Town Sport and Peace Conference will, as in the years before, recognise the International Peace Day of 21 September by convoking representatives from government, non-profit, educational, corporate and media organisations. The groups will challenge each other to break new grounds and discuss if and how Olympic and universal values such as respect, fair play, excellence, friendship are applicable to broader global themes of peace and community development and how best to forge partnerships among diverse organisations to build on those characteristics in the context of the Sustainable Development Goals. Participants will consider how to more closely integrate sports and recreation with educational and civil-discourse initiatives.
